Oulton Park played host to round two of the No Limits Racing endurance championship, which saw 32 teams line-up for the start of the 3-hour long event. Team Fast Bikes, powered by Sorrymate.com, made the best of a limited and wet qualifying session to achieve an 11th place start. "We got a bit of wet track time at the first round", explained Bruce, "so we had a reasonable base-setup to work from. The track is very technical and the pace is massively fast in sections, so you really have to consider how and where you get the hammer down."

For the first practice and qualifying we were testing out our new AIM data logging systems that had been put on the bike for this round. After overcoming a few issues we managed to get them up and running ready for qualifying 2.

Then a matter of hours later I was in Lancaster racing Salt Ayre, the race was very hard and fast, mainly cause by Jack Pullar and myself constantly trying to get away.
